

This tool is primarily used in coal exploration. The tool can be used in applications where portability is important. This light-weight, easy-to-implement tool yields valuable information in remote access situations. Although the tool outputs in CPS units, it can be calibrated to estimate in-situ density. The tool is typically used with cesium-137 sources ranging from 5 to 100 mCuries.